Potato market 'very active'

By Dieter Krieg

MANHEIM — Like many other potato growers across the country, Noah Kreider and Sons grew less of the crop this year than in previous years. But their reason for cutting back may not be the same as for most others.

Potato acreage was cut back much more than expected for 1975, according to government crop statisticians, because of the big supplies and low prices which occurred last season. Although the Kreiders were by no means immune to these marketing developments, their choice to cut back was made primarily because of extra land being needed to meet the feed requirements of their dairy herd.

Noah Kreider, Jr., who with his father, and brother, Richard, operates the 1,000-acre agricultural enterprise, says this year's potato crop is about the same as last year's. They have been harvesting some of the earlier varieties since early August, and expect to continue the digging until mid October. The family has 300 acres planted in Superior, Norchip, and Katahdin spuds, most of which are used for potato chips.

Kreider's receipts thus far show a slightly lower price for potatoes than what was being paid last year, and like in most other farm operations, this is occurring at a time when production costs are multiplying. "Labor, machines, chemicals, and fuel are especially high," Kreider said.

In spite of the poorer economic conditions, the Kreiders are planning to stay in the potato business, mainly because they are set up for it with equipment. When Lancaster Farming visited the family's potato facilities earlier this month, a total of 20 people were employed on the harvesters and grading machines, turning out as much as 125 tons of potatoes per day.

Giant potato digging machines, powered by some of the biggest two-wheel drive tractors on the market, crawled across long, level fields, filling one of five bin wagons every 10 minutes. The crop was then hauled to the warehouse for cleaning, washing, grading, and loading. At times two loads were backed up to the conveyors at the same time. Electric motors whirled as potatoes tumbled and bounced on their way to the tractor and trailer waiting at the other end of the line. Washing was accomplished by way of an artificial created "stream," in which the churning action cleansed the crop of all soil. It takes about an hour and a half to load a tractor trailer which has a capacity of 25 tons.

Kreider reported this year's yield to be around 25 to 300 hundredweights per acre. That estimate may change since it was made fairly early in the season. He also noted that not every day comes with the good harvesting conditions he was experiencing in mid August. No serious problems were encountered in growing this year's crop, although it was a little dry, Kreider said. That is a situation which they can tolerate since all their potato acreage is set up to be irrigated if necessary. The Lancaster County grower sells most of his potatoes by contract and the

Witmer receives national honor

WILLOW STREET — Peter Witmer, the winner of the Dairy Shrine Club's 1975 Student Recognition Contest, hasn't always been sure about choosing a career on the farm.

"I have not always been completely positive that I wanted to continue in dairy farming," the young man said. Witmer explained that while in both high school and college he was exposed to many different vocations, and with his father being a bank director, he at times thought maybe 'things were greener on the other side of the fence'. "But I have talked to a number of people who have left the farm for other lines of work ... and these people without fail have recommended staying on the farm if at all possible and they wished they could go back."

Witmer, a 1974 graduate of Penn State University, has decided to stay on the farm. Looking back now, he said it was the weeks and months spent away at school which convinced him his best future is in the dairy business. He has also learned to appreciate a dairying career more than he did before and looks to that business with enthusiasm and optimism.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Witmer, Willow Street, young Witmer will receive a $500 cash award from the Dairy Shrine Club. He was selected by a panel of judges from a group of 32 outstanding dairy science

Kauffman cow wins York show

By Dieter Krieg

YORK — For the second year in a row, a cow out of the Robert Kauffman herd, Elizabethtown, has won the grand champion banner at the Southcentral Championship Holstein Show held here on Thursday.

"Andfar Astronaut Cinderella," a three year old, won over "Fought Land Eagle Ingra," an aged cow owned by Russell Kline, Denver. These two animals finished in the same order at the Lancaster County Open Holstein Show held at the Guernsey Sales Pavilion on July 31.

The premier breeder and exhibitor of the show was

George M. Knight, Woodbine. The York County breeder took first place in the best three females class, 100,000 pound class, dam-daughter pair, as well as several other categories.

The junior champion of the show was Cindy Knight's "Woodbine Elevation Florence." Taking reserve junior champion honors was a heifer belonging to Russell Kline.

Kline also showed the winning bull of the show, which was judged by Maryland dairyman, William Hill, Jr. The reserve grand champion bull we sort of balanced it on the top in the belief that as it melted it would settle and slide in. Well, it settled all right, but it landed on top of a red-hot kitchen stove and we have seen many a thunderstorm that was far less disturbing than the passage that immediately followed.

Potato

open market. "The potato situation is going to have to get better," Noah Jr. commented. Referring to an article appearing in the Wall Street Journal recently, he observed that the 1975 crop is considerably smaller than last year's and potato futures are rising rapidly. His observation has apparently been correct. Within the past week, futures prices for Maine potatoes have risen by nearly a dollar per cwt. Kreider described the market as "very active."

The Wall Street Journal did indeed report "potato prices may be heading sharply higher." This is said to be the result of the revised government crop reports which were released on August 11. Those statistics revealed much lower figures than what had been posted previously. Aside from potato farmers growing weary of the depressing economic situation, the severe flooding in the Dakotas - a major potato growing area - contributed to the lower spud figures.

Kreider predicts that potato growers in the South will cut back even more than they have so far because they're finding out there's more money in corn and soybeans than spuds. He noted that region had a bad crop this year due to unfavorable weather.

Specifically, the government's crop report indicated that nine percent fewer potatoes will be harvested this year as compared to last. A total of 1,050,000 acres are reportedly planted in potatoes, with the first of the crop hitting the pots and pans now.

In addition to the Kreiders' potato business, the family also maintains a 450-cow milking herd, their own dairy store, 20,000 broilers, and 10,000 layers.

About the House

Country Goes 'Country'

The upcoming Bicentennial is evoking a renewed interest in this country's heritage. It is a challenge to sift through the past to realize a more meaningful present.

Easy Living

Today's lifestyle may be summed up as comfortable. Any decorative look that makes everyone feel right at home is fitting for the times. The predominant decorative look that encompasses this free and easy living is "country."

Vinyl floor resembles painted tile.

The interest in all-things-Bicentennial has not been overlooked by anyone involved in the home. Here, color, design, texture—all the elements that make a house a home—have been updated into modern statements about the American way of life.

Country Look

"Country" is a country-wide expression that could mean Early American on the East Coast or Mexican/Spanish in Southern California. It lets each region express its individual contribution to this land's growth and character. Basically, "country" implies that rigid decorating styles throughout an entire home—or even one room—are "out" and that self-expression is "in."

Farm Commentary

Some fair information

With local fairs in Lancaster Farming's prime coverage area now underway, and many more getting ready to put up their tents, I find it necessary to comment on the importance of cooperation between the news media and fair chairmen or publicity directors.

It is understandable that each event wants "prime" coverage, and it is our responsibility to give that kind of publicity as much as possible. However, to do so is sometimes physically impossible because of conflicting schedules and a shortage of reporters. Furthermore, it takes cooperation on the part of individuals handling the show.

We can't do everything ourselves, nor can we afford to spend hours of our time waiting for results or catering to special wishes of various persons. As requests and notices and invitations come into our office, we must sift through them and try to follow through on as much as possible. Occasionally one or two items get left behind, which can't be helped.

This week, due to a misunderstanding between us and a show director, we returned empty-handed because of hectic schedules on both sides. Such incidents will happen from time to time, but they benefit neither us nor the people wanting the news coverage.

I want to take this opportunity to advise fair chairmen to maintain records of their show results. Sure, they all do, but have you ever been a reporter trying to get them? That can be like pulling teeth from a shark's mouth. The records are somewhere, we've been told, but they can't be found. Unfortunately, we can't wait for hours, and sometimes even a few minutes makes the difference between good and poor coverage. So, please have records available. A copy of the show catalog is most desirable. Surprisingly, some fairs haven't been providing us with such simple tools for good, accurate reporting.

If pictures are to be taken, make sure show winners and their animals are ready. That is another prime ingredient for good publicity.

When good coverage is obtainable, both in pictures and words, then chances are good for an attractive layout in the paper. Not every event can receive the "big page" coverage, due to space limitations. As editor it is my prerogative to decide which story has the most potential for an attractive layout. That decision is based primarily on the story and pictures I have available. And as I've said throughout this commentary, it is up to a fair's management to see to it that good pictures can be taken and show results copied. So, that hopefully answers a question that is asked from time to time: "How do we get coverage like so and so had?"

Life on the farm

By Dieter Krieg

Once a month Dad cleared the dining room table of everything, including the vase and flowers. Then he'd bring out a stack of papers, a roll of stamps, a pack of envelopes, and his checkbook. The only sound in the room was that of a pen scratching on paper. Occasionally he'd ask me to go to town for him to deposit the milk check in the bank and also pay the mortgage. I remember one such occasion.

Going to town was always a special event back then. Although I had been a licensed driver for about two years at that time, opportunities to go away were limited, not to mention being behind the wheel of the family car.

Dad handed me a few pieces of paper representing the items he wanted me to take care of and asked me not to take too long because we had plenty of work to do. I jogged out to the garage, hopped into the car, and was on my way to a small world of my own.

With windows rolled down to catch the summer breezes, and the radio tuned in to my favorite station, the big Olds and I rolled up and down the hills in southern York County towards Red Lion. Driving was fun and easy, and a bit more exciting than operating a pitch fork, pushing a lawn mower, being swatted by a juicy cow tail, or fixing fences. Getting away for an hour or so was like a mini-vacation.

Arriving in Red Lion, I parked the car in front of the bank and walked into the air-conditioned lobby. The row of tellers on the left is where I should pay the mortgage, Dad had instructed, and the deposit was to be made across from there. The lady greeted me, asked about the family briefly, and went to work hunting something up at the files and punching buttons on an adding machine. Then she quickly double-checked the balance by doing it the old-fashioned way with pencil and paper. After stamping the mortgage slips, she returned one to me as a receipt, and I crossed to the other side of the bank.

Following a brief waiting period, it was my turn at the teller-window and for the first time I took notice of the figures on the milk check. I felt as though all the blood of my body had been drained. I stood there stunned and speechless while the teller recorded the deposit. The monthly mortgage payment was for $1794. The milk check was nearly a hundred dollars short of that amount.

I thought of Dad at home, with his bills arranged all across the dining room table. Some businesses would have to wait for their money, and one or two of our cows would undoubtedly be going out for beef within a few days.

The drive home wasn't as care-free as the drive to town.

A PINCH OF SALT

Lesson for August 24, 1975

Background Scripture: Matthew 5:13-16; Acts 4:13-16; 8:4-8, 26-40; Romans 1:14-17; I Peter 3:13-16.

Devotional Reading: Roman 10:4-15.

A number of years ago, a woman in my congregation found a little book entitled, FISH. The book was about a program of neighborly help that churches and groups of churches can sponsor in their own community. Services such as emergency babysitting, transportation, meals for the elderly, putting people in touch with community resources, etc., are provided by volunteers working through an advertised "Fish" telephone number and an answering service.

The salt of the world

The name, "Fish," is a reference to the ancient symbol by which Christians identified themselves to each other in the days of the Roman Empire. The fish symbol stood for Jesus Christ and thus it serves as an appropriate identification for the "Fish" program.

The woman from my congregation was excited by this program and shared the book with another parishoner who eventually gave the book to me. I, in turn, shared the book with a small Bible study and prayer group that met twice a month in members' homes. The group often talked about Christian witness: here was an opportunity to actually put some of those convictions into practice.

One of the women in that group accepted responsibility to serve as the organizer and soon a modest beginning was made. Today, several years later, Fish is no longer a project of just that small group of people, nor even of our church. It has become a countywide co-operative effort in which many different churches participate both with volunteers and financial support.

A matter of taste

This is a simple illustration of what one person's efforts, "a pinch of salt," can accomplish for the Gospel. There was nothing dramatic about her efforts, but that one woman with her simple words of encouragement started in motion a most fruitful project that is reaching many lives for Christ.

Our people who have participated in this project have found that this opportunity for witness has produced "salt," not only for those who are the beneficiaries of "Fish," but also the volunteers. It has provided some extra "flavor" for their Christian lives, just as table salt can do that for dull, tasteless foods.

Too often we wonder what just one person can do. Perhaps we should remember the truth of that old nursery rhyme:

For want of a nail, the shoe was lost.
For want of a shoe, the horse was lost.
For want of a horse, the rider

To Prune Raspberry Plants

Old canes which have borne the 1975 raspberry crop should be cut out in order to stimulate new growth upon which next year's fruit will develop. The old canes are "at the end of the line" and are of no further use to the grower. Prunings should be burned or buried, or taken to authorized solid waste disposal plants. After the pruning has been done, the plants should be sprayed with both an insecticide such as Malathion, and a fungicide such as Captan to control pests. Fertilizing should be done early in the spring and not at this time of the year. A regular spray schedule should be followed starting early spring with the delayed dormant spray.

To Apply For Gasoline Tax Refund

September 30 is the deadline for farmers to apply for the 8c per gallon state tax refund on liquid fuels. This is for liquid fuels used in non-licensed tractors for agricultural purposes and for power farm machinery used for farm purposes. The period is from July 1, 1974 to June 30, 1975. Farmers who do not have application forms can secure them from the Board of Finance and Revenue, Room 130R Finance Building, Harrisburg, Pa. 17120. This must be done by September 30 in order to get this refund.

To Evaluate Insurance Coverage

The insurance industry is big business and one that is very important to everyone. At this time I'm concerned with the coverage on farm buildings and contents; many farmers may not have adjusted their coverage recently and therefore are under-insured. It is not the first cost that should be covered, but the replacement cost. Property owners are urged to contact their insurance agents to evaluate the extent of their coverage. Liability insurance is another major item that needs regular attention. Employees and visitors need coverage and the farmer needs liability protection.

More than one celebration

In a time when many activities revolving around the United States' Bicentennial seem to make it more "buy-centennial," it was nice to see a remark made by Farmfest '76 Exec. Dir. Ed Hart, referring to our agrarian beginnings. "Why should the Bicentennial be all battle reenactments? It took a lot more than war to make America... people think of the Bicentennial as a salute to 1776. Not so. We are celebrating every one of those 200 great years since America gained her sovereignty," he notes. Right on, Ed!

Tractor pull

By Dieter Krieg

KUTZTOWN — There was lots to do at the Kutztown Fair this past week, with cattle shows, exhibits, rides, games, and lots of people to meet. But the event which by far attracted the most attention was the tractor pulling contest on Wednesday night.

This was the first year a tractor pulling contest had been held at the fair, and it was also the first time for many of the spectators who surrounded the track.

"I thought tractors hooked up to one another to pull," one lady said. "I thought so too," replied her companion without moving his eyes away from the track. Several thousand people were on hand to take part in the excitement. Those on the edges of the field were craning their necks to get a better view.

York teams take four first places

Editor's Note: York County's 4-H Achievement Day participants at University Park did considerably better than was reported in last week's issue. They came through the activities, held in mid August, with four first place teams. Results furnished to us a week ago from the University's Extension Service office made no mention of that fact.

With 60 4-H'ers participating, York County had one of the largest groups of qualifiers for the 4-H Achievement Days which

Straight shooting all the way down the line earned these archers the first place team title at the 4-H Achievement Days held earlier this month at the Penn State campus. The York County team made a clean

York County 4-H members were first place winners in the Dairy Judging Contest held at State 4-H Achievement Days. From left are: Cindy Rutter, high individual in the contest, York; Paul Knight, Airville, Cindy Knight 11th individual, Airville and Leonard Greek, 8th individual, Delta; and Lee Jinks, State 4-H Leader.

American women love to cook and bake—but they hate calories

Sugartwin, the low calorie granulated sugar substitute made by Alberto-Culver Company, proved this by attracting thousands of recipes in a contest that required only the use of white and/or brown Sugar-

per cent fewer calories and is a money-saver as well

Contestants were asked to submit recipes in any category — pies, cookies, cakes, beverages, non-dessert items, toppings, breads—any dish or drink made with Sugartwin. Culinary creativity was welcomed. Recipes were judged for originality, taste and overall appeal.

Twenty-five women from 18 states were selected as winners and each received a beautiful four-piece silver coffee service valued at $350

Recipes in any category were eligible as long as they were made with Sugartwin, which not only looks, pours, measures and tastes like sugar but has 91

The 25 winning recipes included Date nut cake, stuffed cabbage, caraway green beans, orange julius, chewy Cheddar cut-ups, mock pecan pie, brownies, a wide variety of cookies, nut bread, pork balls in sauerkraut nest and coconut macaroons

Stoltzfus elected news reporter

By Melissa Piper

ELVERSON — Robert Stoltzfus, the 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Houck, Elverson R2, was recently selected as the Reporter for the State FFA organization. Robert's appointment to the state office is the fourth of such for the Twin Valley High School.

The Berks County youth was an active FFA'er at Twin Valley for four years taking hog fattening as his main project. "We always had hogs and beef around the home farm," Robert commented, "so when I went into FFA work I decided to take hog fattening as I was familiar with the work involved."

Active in FFA since his greenhand year in 1971, Robert has participated in the Berks County Swine Show and sale and was a livestock judge at both the Kutztown Fair and FFA activities week at Penn State. In his sophomore year, Robert served his chapter as sentinel while competing in the public speaking competitions and the swine show and sale.

In his junior year as an FFA'er, Robert was elected vice-president of the chapter and as the chairman of the Building Our American Communities he arranged for and coordinated a water testing program for chapter members in conjunction with the Chester County Board of Health.

Robert was elected president of the local organization during his senior year and also served as the county treasurer. An accomplished tractor driver, the youth placed first in the competition at the Kutztown Fair and also at the regional FFA tractor driving contest.

Along with his other duties, Robert also was chosen as the county star farmer and received his Keystone Degree at the Midwinter convention.

Commenting on his selection as a state officer, Robert shared his views by stating, "I'm glad I have the chance to represent FFA at various meetings that will be coming up in the fall."

"As a State officer, I will have to give a challenge to other FFA members to see the worth in joining the organization."

Robert will be responsible for four counties in the eastern portion of Pa. which will include visiting some 25 schools.

As the state reporter, Robert will have the duties of keeping the state scrapbook and publicizing FFA through various publications.

"I hope to have more articles in publications about our activities," the Berks youth stated.

Being elected a state officer was not novel to Robert's family, as his brother Frank served as the State-wide vice president in 1972-73.

Along with his new duties, Robert will be continuing the farming career he began following his graduation this spring.

"I plan to continue my hog operation," he commented, "and also I bought a combine which I plan to use for custom harvesting."

Although graduated from the chapter FFA, Robert will be continuing his membership by visiting the various schools in his area.

Witmer receives honor

student nominees from across the country.

The Dairy Shrine Club created the student award in 1969 to encourage young men and women enrolled in dairy science courses to continue working with dairy cattle when they complete their formal education. Selections are made on the basis of leadership, scholastic record, past experiences and plans for the future.

Witmer had been an active leader in both high school and college and continues to be influential in farm organizations, especially the Pennsylvania Guernsey Breeders Association. In 1973 he won the National Outstanding Guernsey Youth Award.

While at Penn State, the youth served as an officer of the dairy science club, assistant editor of the Dairyman, the club's yearbook and chairman of the college's dairy exposition.

A member of Alpha Zeta, the biology and agriculture honorary fraternity, Witmer also participated on the University's dairy cattle judging team and received the 1974 William R. Davey Award as the outstanding senior in dairy science. In addition, he has served as president of the State Junior Guernsey Breeders Association, and as an official judge at dairy shows.

The young dairyman's farm experiences date back to as far as he can remember, and he adds he has been actively involved since he was old enough to work. The family owns 135 head of registered Guernseys, of which 13 belong to Peter. Aside from his experiences with the home farm, Witmer has also had opportunities to work with others, including different breeds. This has given him a wide range of experience in showing, fitting, and more recently management. He believes it has given him a more complete and objective viewpoint of the dairy industry as a whole.

While the past is an important consideration in evaluating the applications for the award, the students' future plans are not overlooked.

As one of four children born to the Witmers, Peter said he had to be very careful in evaluating the position he was in. He said he wanted to be absolutely sure about taking over the farm because he wanted to, as opposed to simply taking it to continue family ownership. A younger brother and two sisters have not indicated strong interest in the farm so far.

His four years at college is what really caused him to realize how much he appreciated the farm. Grinning broadly as he explained that statement, he said he was in for a lot of razzing by his fraternity brothers who were dedicated Holstein enthusiasts. In defending himself and his Guernseys, he strengthened his convictions and found his goals, he remarked. "I was glad to get back with the cows, you don't know how much you really like and miss something, until you leave it," Witmer said.

"I didn't go to college with the intention of learning how to farm," the award winner stated. "Sure, it was a worthwhile education, not just academically; but my main reason for going was because I wasn't sure about what I wanted to do and I wanted to expose myself to other careers. A person has to be sure of himself," he emphasized.

Witmer is convinced that there is a good future in dairy farming for those who are determined to stay with it, but he adds quickly "it won't be easy." As far as young people starting out is concerned, he says it would be very difficult without a 'direct link', but not necessarily impossible. Those herds which have production and can maintain it will make it," he predicted.

The 65-cow Witmer herd, housed in comfort stalls and milked with pipeline milkers, has a rolling herd average of 12,739M with a 4.9 test and 627 pounds of butterfat. The young dairyman expects the size of the herd to grow, especially if it is to support two families and if a jugging operation is added. While not opposed to expansion, he expressed considerable concern about the changes in management which would result with increased herd size.

"I believe the best way to feed cows is individually," Witmer remarked. "As we get larger this will become less practical and problems will increase, but we will meet them as they come up and I think we'll find a suitable solution as we have done in the past." Definite plans for expansion or a jugging operation have not been made yet, but they are being considered.

The Witmer's 130 acre farm is situated among moderately rolling hills south of Lancaster. Neatly painted buildings, white board fences, a spacious lawn dotted with trees and shrubs, and beautiful flower beds accent the premise's appearance. Located on a major north-south highway, Witmer believes they will have good access to customers for their retail milk store, if and when it becomes reality. He would like to have quality control over his products all the way to the consumer, pointing out that many people really don't know what a good glass of milk tastes like.

Recalling an experience in

New York City, the young dairyman said he has tasted so-called "milk" which tasted like chalk-water. Such incidents have convinced him that dairymen must have more control over quality control of their product and he also believes strongly in promoting dairy products.

Guernseys are of special interest to Witmer, and he expressed some concern over the future of the breed, although he maintained

LEBANON COUNTY DHIA MONTHLY REPORT

July 1975

Willow Maple Farm's 47 Holsteins overcame record-breaking July heat to produce an average of 57.3 pounds of milk per day during the month. Their average daily butterfat production per cow was 1.86 pounds. Both figures were the highest recorded for the July DHIA summary. Second high place in milk production went to the Jesse Weaver herd, whose 28.6 cows averaged 52 pounds per cow per day. In average daily butterfat production, Isaac Zimmerman and Raymond Getz wound up in a tie with 1.83 pounds.

The top individual record completed in the County on DHIA in 365 days or less belongs to "Patty," a nine-year-old Holstein owned by Galen Bollinger. She produced 17,571 pounds of milk with a 4.7 test and 830 pounds of butterfat. Trailing her by four pounds in the butterfat column was Melvin Horst's six-year-old "number 9." She pumped out 19,215 M with a 4.3 percent butterfat test.

Following is a list of those herds whose averages on DHIA were 1.25 pounds of butterfat or better.

The pursuit of a dream;

PORT ROYAL — Harold Sheaffer, a young industrial arts teacher who grew up on a farm and clings to his heritage dearly, has a dream which advanced a notch towards reality last week. His ambition is to create a year-round agricultural exhibit to depict life as it was in in-land America.

"I want to build a working situation as authentic as possible, and offer seminars for people to come in and take part in or re-learn forgotten skills," Sheaffer remarked. Already prepared with hundreds of antique agricultural items and machinery, as well as a farm, Sheaffer is aiming for an educational display where people can see all of the various progressions of American agriculture on one site. He calls this dream, now eight years old, "Agricultural Americana," and claims to have a 20 year program worked out towards realizing this goal.

A bachelor, with degrees in agricultural engineering, industrial arts, and biology, he says he is determined to see his dream come true.

"I really care about what is happening to American agriculture," the nostalgic part-time farmer explained. "I care about our American heritage and believe people have a need, and a right to know about it — I care about what we are losing," he said.

Sheaffer went ahead this year in organizing the first "Agricultural Americana" at the Port Royal Fairgrounds. Practically all of the machines on display belonged to the young enthusiast, as did hundreds of household and crafts items. He eventually plans on having his entire collection — approximately 1,000 pieces — at a permanent site for "Agricultural Americana," which will in all likelihood be his farm.

The earliest dated piece of equipment Sheaffer has in his collection is 258 years old. Among some of the bigger items he owns are 17 threshing machines; a left-hand, water-powered saw mill with friction feed; a fully operatable grist mill; a steam tractor; a 1923 Fordson; an original ox cart; an original Conestoga wagon; 27 sleighs and much more. Someday he hopes to host the "biggest threshing reunion in the eastern United States."

Asked if his "Agricultural Americana" might be similar to the popular colonial attractions in Massachusetts and Virginia — Sturbridge Village and Williamsburg — he nodded but emphasized he planned to depict rural life as it was in in-land America, as opposed to coastal regions. "I think it would be a boost in the arm for Central Pennsylvania," he remarked.

A science and industrial arts teacher at Kutztown High School, with additional duties as manager of a college cafeteria and coach for two sports, Sheaffer devotes whatever time he has left over to pursuit of his dream. He grew up on a Juniata County farm and is proud to have milked the first 1,000-pound butterfat cow in that area. He left the farm in 1960 to go to school; spent some time in the service; and is currently working on his masters degrees in biology and industrial arts. When I met Sheaffer, he was busy cutting wood for one of the steam tractors which participated in the agricultural exhibition he is pioneering. Wiping sweat from his brow, he took a few minutes of his time between "chores" to discuss his plans and explain items of interest. The large, steam-powered "iron horse" caught my attention right from the start — as did the team of horses and the wagons they were pulling and the threshing machines. "One of these steam tractors can easily pull a 12-bottom plow, and uproot trees with trunks measuring 10 inches in diameter," he explained. Surprisingly, his 18-ton Frick steam tractor was rated at only 18 horsepower. But he said this figure was just a rating of its day and misleading by today's standards. "Isn't this fascinating," one middle-aged man in the crowd said. "Yes," said the other, but it's not just that for me — it brings back a lot of fond memories."

"Americana" made its debut at Port Royal with hundreds of people visiting the five-day show over 45 acres. The show is a dream come true for Sheaffer, upper left. The nostalgia-oriented show, who owns 1,000 agricultural antiques, drew the show to attract national attention. The show was of special interest to onlookers, (above right) delighted in being buried by chaff of the thresher.

Likewise for me. Although I do not recall the days of steam tractors, the old time threshing machines were still in use for several years after I was born, and nothing thrilled me more during the summer than to see those fascinating machines in action. I watched them until the dust and chaff had covered me completely and left only when threatened with a spanking. After that I lay awake for part of the night, listening to the lively sounds of threshing mixed with that of frogs and crickets.

Those were summer evenings I won't forget ... the hum and muffled roar of the threshing machines, the chirping of crickets, the croaking of frogs ... while the light of the full moon came through my bedroom window.

Here at the Port Royal show, the smell of oats, steam, and burning wood was strong as men prepared for threshing, with directions from Sheaffer. The horse-drawn wagon pulled into position. The steam tractor crept to its destination at a snail's pace, surprising onlookers by its silence during the entire operation.

With belt in place, the "engineer" tugged at the whistle, released the clutch, and opened the throttle. The cylinder pulsed and thumped, picking up speed rapidly. The flywheel spun and the belt slapped up and down for a moment until it built up momentum. From then on it was excitement for everyone and nostalgia for those who could remember the days when such activities didn't have to be staged.

The chaff blew around vigorously near the

I asked Mervin Grubb, who supplied one of his steam tractors for use in the show, what it cost to build such an iron horse when they were in their prime. He estimated $3,000 and added it would take around $50,000 to build one today. The steam tractor owner makes his home in Steelton where he is an automobile mechanic and lists steam tractors as his hobby. "I wouldn't give you a penny for all the antique automobiles, nor gasoline tractors... but steam, I'm interested in'em!" he said with the white of his eyes gleaming from behind a face which was tanned by the sun and blackened by the engine's fumes.

His tractor, a 1928 Peerless, was originally purchased by a Lancaster Countian, Amos Stoltzfuss. Grubb said the tractor was the last one off the assembly line and the company had trouble selling it because gasoline-powered tractors were taking over. He is only the second owner of the steam-belching iron horse and guesses that there are still a couple hundred of them around in the state. "A lot of them were cut up for scrap during World War II," he pointed out.

Both Sheaffer and Grubb revealed that one horsepower in a steam tractor is equal to about seven in a gas tractor. Accordingly, Grubb believes his engine, rated at 50 horsepower, is equivalent to 350 of a conventional tractor. But it's certainly not all horsepower that makes them powerful, it's their immense weight, and the gear ratio which allows for tremendous torque. Their road speed, on the other hand, is only three miles per hour.

What do you do for spare parts for these old machines?

Sheaffer says so far he has been fortunate enough to receive parts along with the antique machines he buys. He says 95 per cent of his machinery collection is in good working order. In touring the display area, Sheaffer explained that the early farm machinery was very simple and very practical in design. "Simplicity was stressed," he remarked while taking things apart at the twist of his wrist. "No sophistication — no problems."

While Sheaffer's collection is sizable by any standards, it had been bigger. Three weeks ago disaster struck at one of the barns where he keeps his machinery. Every item went up in smoke, including a wagon valued at $2,000. The loss grieves the collector, who remembers plowing and logging with horses when he was 11 years of age.

Aside from the large farm machinery, visitors to the five-day festival also had an opportunity to see craftsmen at work and halls filled with wares which date back to colonial days. For those with lively feet, the state's top square dancing team was on hand to perform, with the audience invited to participate.

"Agricultural Americana" is one of several such events to take place in Pennsylvania. The "Rough and Tumble" organization at Kinzers sponsors old-time farming activities each summer, as does Williams Grove, where "Horse and Buggy Days" get underway tomorrow. Later in the week the iron horses perform in front of plows as well as threshing machines.

Witmer

"The Guernsey breed has some problems - mostly in sire proving programs - because we don't have the large pool of cattle from which to draw and breed to and test." He believes a possible solution to this problem may be joint efforts by farmers to buy and prove sires.

Describing himself as a dairyman who appreciates all breeds, Witmer confessed to preferring Guernseys. "But I'm not putting down other breeds," he grinned. "I prefer Guernseys for their temperament, efficiency, and the flavor of their milk," he said. He would like to see breeders push their product more, claiming that if you push the product, you solve the other problems of the breed, or industry for that matter. Witmer owns some stock in Guernsey Restaurants, Inc., an organization started by Pennsylvania Guernsey breeders to promote the Guernsey name and their cows' products.

The young farmer's dairying philosophy also includes a "deemphasis on the size of cows," because production is not directly related to body size and the larger cows are subject to more stress. He also advocates supervision, pointing out it can be spread too thin in some operations.

Witmer draws his conclusion from over a dozen years of activity in 4-H, discussions and observation while in high school and college, and on-the-farm experiences. All in all, this broad range of activity is what convinced him the grass was greenest on his side of the fence, and it eventually earned him the prestigious Student Recognition Award.

The National Dairy Shrine Club is an organization of over 5,500 dairymen and industry leaders in the United States and several foreign countries. It was organized in 1949 to honor dairy leaders past and present, to record dairy history and to inspire dairy leaders of the future.

Body Weight

A man will weigh about a pound more if he steps on the bathroom scales after taking a shower but before he dries off. That's due to the film of water, one-fiftieth of an inch thick, that remains on the body after bathing. Also, the average human body contains enough fat to make about seven or eight bars of soap.

EASY INSTALLATION

Installation is faster, simpler and less expensive because of the unique features built into each Martin Free Stall. Pre-drilled, rear angle brackets allow easy fastening to wooden headboards, walls—or for placement that is independent of any support.

Only the Martin Free Stall has that "extra bend" that provides a straight downward leg into a narrower concrete curb. Concrete curbs that hold and retain the bedding—as well as anchor each free-standing stall—need not be constructed wider than six inches.

Harvestore® and Slurrystore® help make both ends of your dairy business more profitable.

These big blue Harvestore structures are a familiar sight on dairy farms all over America. As a matter of fact, our very first ones were constructed on dairy farms over 25 years ago, and are still feeding the cows.

Thousands of dairymen have found that owning a Harvestore system is just like adding extra hours to the day and extra acres to the farm. Why? With a Harvestore structure, you can forget about baling hay, hauling it, stacking it, unstacking it and breaking bales. You just cut it, chop it and blow it into the structure. The feeding becomes as simple as pressing a button.

A Harvestore structure can also be a natural for storing corn silage or high-moisture grain.

Well, as we said, thousands of dairymen already know that story, perhaps you're one of them. But, maybe you haven't seen the latest member of our Harvestore dairy profit team. We call it Slurrystore, because it stores manure in a liquid form . . . out of the way, out of sight and secure . . . to help you avoid contamination of streams, ponds, or ground water.

On most dairy farms, Slurrystore can store all of the manure produced for periods of up to 6 months which means you can spend your time on other things and apply the manure whenever it is most convenient to do so.

We're proud of this newest member of the Harvestore family and we sincerely believe with the Harvestore System and Slurrystore System you can make both ends of your dairy business more profitable.

PURINA GOLDEN BULKY

What is Purina Golden Bulky?

Purina Golden Bulky has long been a favorite of profit-minded dairymen because this bulky, nutritious feed can be used so many different ways to help increase milk production and add income to dairy operations throughout America.

Golden Bulky was first fed to cows and heifers in the early 1900's. Since its introduction, Purina Dairy scientists have made many improvements which have added to its versatility and milk-making qualities.

It is a bulky, nutritious, easy-to-feed 10 percent protein ration containing molasses. Cows really love its sweet, succulent flavor! It is a versatile ration, which fits well into feeding programs for milk cows, heifers or dry cows. With its fortification of minerals and Vitamins A and D it makes an excellent supplement in roughage programs with hay, pastures or corn silage.

Because of its versatile qualities it has often been called "A dairyman's best friend."

the versatile, sweet tasting, easy-to-feed Dairy ration that provides cows with the right balance of essential vitamins, minerals and carbohydrates essential to top milk production.

Cows love it!

Youngsters learn about animals by visiting "down on the farm"

By Melissa Piper
ANNVILLE — "How ya gonna keep em down on the farm" has been a popular quip for many years, but one sure way to keep children coming back to visit a farm is to take them to Raymond Funck's animal preserve near Lebanon.

Coincidentally named "Down on the Farm," the Funcks have been entertaining adults as well as children for the past few years by giving new insights to "city cousins" as well as to seasoned farmers.

The Funcks began their animal farm about six years ago after their children had begun a collection of stray and pet animals. For the first few years, the Funcks kept their farm on a relatively private basis giving educational field trips to schools. However, as their popularity began to spread, Raymond Funck decided to open his doors to the public.

Since that time, bus loads of school children along with many visiting tourists and neighbors alike have driven to Annaville to view Funck's many native and special animals.

Raymond Funck, who admits "I do this cause I like children" likes to treat visiting school children to a milking contest. "We have 75 Holsteins which is our primary source of income and we allow the children to try their hand at milking."

"You'd be surprised at how many of our city cousins don't know where milk comes from," Funck commented.

"So along with giving an educational view I allow them to have a milking contest usually between the boys and girls."

Funck keeps many animals native to both Pa. and the country on his farm so that children as well as adults can see wildlife close-up. White-tailed deer, native birds, fawns, and groundhogs are all to be seen. Two particularly seasoned favorites at the farm are Toby and Tammy, the bears, which entertain for the visitors in reward for a sip of carbonated soft drink.

Also to be found as native animals are a host of wild turkeys, raccoons, a fox and many kinds of pheasants.

Heading the line up of "special animals" is Sam the elk, which reigns supreme in a pasture of his own. Carrying a large rack, Sam is a popular attraction. Also popular on the tour is Funck's Fallow deer native to Asia, a pair of bison and pygmy goats.

Raymond Funck, owner of "Down on the Farm" offers a snack to Bambi and Bimbo two fawns at the farm.

COOLING SYSTEM

MOST CAR MAKERS SUGGEST A HALF-WATER, HALF-PERMANENT-TYPE ETHYLENE GLYCOL COOLANT. THIS WILL CARRY YOU DOWN TO 34 BELOW ZERO FOR WINTER AND MOVE THE BOILING POINT ABOVE NORMAL. YOU CAN MIX BRANDS AS LONG AS BOTH ARE ETHYLENE GLYCOL.

Living up to his name, Troubles the goat takes a nibble from a blooming geranium plant. A pygmie goat, Troubles stands about 18 inches high and is a favorite at the Funck's farm.

Also special to view are Funck's collection of birds that include Silver and Gold pheasants, Rheas (the third largest bird in the world), Canadian geese, Egyptian geese and quail.

The Funcks have received license from the Game Commission for progeny permits and also have a menagerie license from the USDA to keep their animals for the public.

Along with his animals, Funck and his wife Polly also cater to arranged hayrides, a recreation often exciting and novel for city as well as country children.

"Sometimes it gets hectic," Funck explained, "and there are times when I wonder if I'll get my main work done, but in the long run I enjoy teaching the visitors about animal life and letting them see first hand just what nature provides for us to see."

There have been many occasions when the Funcks have given up their personal time to conduct tours and hayrides even though their own farm work had to be laid aside. But those times mean little compared to the satisfaction the children have expressed in visiting "Down on the Farm."

The August 30th edition of the Shindig at Cripple Creek will feature the Wilburn Brothers, a noted Country-Western Musical group which have been featured on their own television show for a number of years. Joining the Wilburn Brothers will be The Kings Country Men and Red Thomas and the Men of Note.

Farmdefinition changed

WASHINGTON — To better reflect today's agriculture, the official definition of a farm is being changed. The U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Bureau of the Census will now define a farm as "any establishment from which $1,000 or more of agricultural products is sold or would normally be sold during a year."

Under the old definition used since the late 1950's, a farm was any place under 10 acres with annual sales of $250 or more of agricultural goods, or any place of 10 or more acres selling $50 or more.

The new definition will result in a decreased number of farms. The extent of the decrease will be known following review of the 1974 Census of Agriculture. The Bureau of the Census will report the 1974 information using both the old and new definitions. Under the old definition, the 1969 Census counted 2.7 million farms.

In view of the diversity of today's farming operations, classes of farms are also being modified. The major classes will be:

1. Primary farm - one where the operator spends at least half his work-time on the farm; also one operated by a corporation or multi-establishment company which receives at least half its gross business income from farming.

2. Part-time farm - one where the operator spends less than half his work-time on the farm.

3. Business-associated farm - one operated by a corporation or multi-establishment company which receives less than half its gross business income from farming.

A fourth class of "abnormal farm" will continue to use to define farms operated by an institution such as a hospital or school, or by an Indian reservation or as an experimental or research farm.

Other changes are being made in the classification system to add more value of sales classes for farms with over $100,000 of sales and to add more detailed categories for types of farms.

These changes are being made so the economic and statistical information produced by USDA and the Census Bureau can better describe today's farming industry. Important statistical series of USDA will be changed to reflect the

Butz: 'milk reasonably priced'

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "Food prices are reasonable. Milk is reasonably priced. And to maintain reasonable price levels, farmers must be able to continue to produce." That was the message of Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz as he addressed the Board of Directors of the National Milk Producers Federation in Washington, DC earlier this month.

Among the directors attending were Lester C. Jones, president; Daniel L. Martin, vice president; and Dr. James E. Honan, general manager of Interstate Milk Producers' Cooperative, Southampton, PA. The 3,000-member dairy cooperative is one of the oldest members of NMPF. Reviewing the problems of inflation throughout the economy, the Secretary stated, "Inflation hurts the farmer more than anyone else." He noted the dairy farmer, as any other small businessman or farmer, is in business to make money. His continued ability to provide an adequate supply of wholesome milk and dairy products for the consumer across the country depends on his realizing a fair return for his effort. Declining milk production in recent months, coupled with rising production costs makes some increase in the price of milk and dairy products inevitable during the fall and winter months ahead.

Farmers — as the largest consumers of a wide variety of commodities such as steel, chemicals and feed — are fully aware of the pressures of increasing costs and thus understand consumer concern. Inflation has caused increases in energy costs, feed prices have risen, fertilizers cost more, processing, packaging and distribution costs are up and labor costs have increased.

All of these factors have greatly increased the cost of producing milk on the farms across the country and of moving that milk from the farmer to the consumer.

One of the most visible responses to these costs increases has been a decline in milk production, a reduction in the number of dairy cows on farms and a drop in milk production per cow as farmers attempt to control their own costs. This has resulted in a shifting of the supply-demand balance within the dairy industry, making some price increase necessary in order to sustain production.

In recent weeks, the prices for dairy products have firmed, and fluid milk prices can be expected to follow shortly. While farm prices may decline seasonally when production expands after the first of the year, the retail price level for milk and dairy products could well remain at the same levels in response to higher costs of processing, packaging and distribution.

During the Federation sessions, it was pointed out that a moderate price increase in the weeks ahead could help to maintain milk production, relieving pressure for larger price increases later in the year as supplies would normally grow even shorter.

The Berks Co. dairy princess has chosen nursing as a career

By Sally Bair
Farm Feature Writer

Seventeen-year-old Cathy Yanos has a list of 4-H activities which never seems to end. But despite her busy summers, she was persuaded to enter the Berks County Dairy Princess contest and came out a winner.

Cathy, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Yanos, Douglassville R2, already has some ideas about things she would like to do as Dairy Princess, so the next year is sure to be an active one for her.

"I think farmers already know how important milk is, so we should try to reach others," Cathy says. She said the Berks County dairy promotion week at the Berkshire Mall was very successful and it will be tried again next year, perhaps adding something special each night. "I might give some demonstrations," she says.

There are some plans for her to visit elementary school children in the first, second and third grades. If she does visit them, she said, "I will emphasize how important milk is to drink and give out recipes. That will get their mothers more aware."

Another idea for promoting milk which was suggested at the recent dairy princess seminar, Cathy said, is "to preside at a supermarket dairy case and hand out recipes and perhaps samples of a dairy product or a milk punch." This kind of appearance can be especially effective, Cathy said, if the supermarket can be persuaded to run a special on a dairy product.

The dairy princess can be valuable, Cathy said, "Because people will pay attention to a princess."

The Yanos farm is approximately 260 acres, with 50 milking Holsteins. In addition to Cathy, there are two boys, Bobby 16, and Glenn, 12 and six-year-old Marianne, self-proclaimed future Dairy Princess.

Cathy readily admits that she is not a regular farm worker because she is often too busy. But she does help with the milking in the evening and if her parents go away, she and her brothers are capable of taking over all the chores. But, Cathy, says, "I do a lot of cooking."

Cathy does not have a 4-H dairy project, as one might expect of a Dairy Princess, but she has been a 4-H member for nine years and has carried a wide variety of projects. One project she has had almost continually since she began is baby beef. She has had Hereford, Charolais and Angus and has shown at the Reading Fair, the Kutztown Fair and Oley Fair and in 1973 she showed at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show. She has also had swine projects.

Cathy just returned from 4-H State Days at Penn State where she was a member of the fifth high meat judging team. She ranked 22 as an individual.

Cathy feeds a new calf in the Yanos herd.

Farms Get Redefined

A recent announcement that reached our office this week explained that an official redefinition of farms was about to occur.

The announcement stated that "the official definition of a farm has been changed to better reflect today's agriculture."

The USDA and the Bureau of Census will now be defining a farm as "any establishment from which $1000 or more of agricultural products is sold or would normally be sold during a year."

The last definition given for use by the census was given in the late 1950's when a farm was defined as any place under 10 acres with annual sales of $500 or more of agricultural goods or any place of 10 or more acres selling $50 or more

From that definition posed in the late 50's it is startling to see just how much agriculture has grown and prospered. At that particular time, most of the farms included in the census were family operations quite a bit smaller than today's farm.

Although our Secretary of Agriculture, Earl Butz has recently noted that corporate farming is not increasing as rapidly as it once was, still many farms in the US are no longer family type operations.

The new definition will no doubt result in a decreased number of places designated as farms. But the extent of the decrease will not be entirely known until the 1974 Census has been published.

Homestead Notes

Meat judging sounds like one of those very interesting things one should know about these days, and as Cathy explained it she supported this viewpoint. Part of the contest is meat identification, she said, and that consists of knowing wholesale cuts, retail cuts and method of cooking. She explained that contestants must give oral reasons on carcasses and must judge which is the best of several loins. This is the second year Cathy has been on the team and in 1973 she gave a demonstration on meat identification, so she said she felt fairly sure of her subject.

Other projects she has had include clothing, child and family relations, leadership, jellies and jams, freezing, candle making, bicycling, home environment which includes such things as start with a small change, terrariums, dish gardens and flower arranging.

Cathy has had so many projects in the home environment area and has done so well that this year she was one of three 4-H'ers in the state who were interviewed at State 4-H days for the possibility of being a Keystone winner. That would mean a trip to National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago, and if she wins, it would be a first for Cathy.

Cathy is currently president of the Exeter Community Club and is a member of the Berks County Baby Beef Club. She is vice-president of the Berks County 4-H Council, which organizes and carries out all county activities such as the demonstration contest and the county 4-H fair which was held two weeks ago in Kutztown.

A big honor for Cathy this summer was the opportunity to travel to Washington, D. C. to participate in the Citizenship Short Course at the National 4-H Club Center. There were two from Berks County and about 100 from Pennsylvania attending with her. She was a member of the Conference committee which helps make rules for the week and work out any discipline problems. There were eight states at the conference with 500 4-H'ers totally.

Cathy said the highlight of the week for her was being asked to host representatives of Sun Oil Company at a luncheon. Cathy explained that they were considering making a donation to the 4-H Club Foundation.

The group toured Washington, D. C., as any tourists, of course, but a special tour of the White House was arranged and Cathy said they got to see really close-up how the president lives. Cathy said, "There were no ropes and the carpets were rolled down. We saw all through the basement and outside in the gardens. Even though the President was not there we saw the entrances he uses."

But the thing she liked best of all, Cathy said, was the National Zoo. She said, "I had been to Washington twice before, and had seen a lot of the things. But I had never been to the zoo. I loved the zoo." She said she considered attending the conference "an honor."

Last year Cathy attended the Leadership School at 4-H Club Congress at Penn State.

In the spring she represented Berks County at Capitol Days in Harrisburg and was asked to give the invocation at the breakfast for legislators. She said, "I really liked Capitol Days. A highlight was learning just what the state is doing to prepare for the Bicentennial. Many things are being done in coordination with 4-H, and it made me much more aware."

Cathy pours a glass of cold refreshing milk for an adoring six-year-old sister, Marianne.

At State Days this year Cathy was mistress of ceremonies for the opening assembly.

Through 4-H Cathy has also become an accomplished seamstress. The gown she wore for the Dairy Princess contest was her project this year, and it was so well done that she received a perfect score in Dress Revue. She said, "I never did that well in dress revue. I knew this dress was sewn well, but I didn't think it was that good." The dress was enhanced by hand embroidery, but Cathy added honestly, "I can't really say I enjoyed working with it. The fabric wrinkled a lot, and every pin hole showed." Another sad note was that she had elected not to enter the awards program in dress revue, because she felt she would not do that well.

For the county dress revue Cathy wrote the commentary. She said, "I worked on it for days."

4-H has obviously played a large part in Cathy's life, and her hard work was rewarded last year when she was named Outstanding 4-H Girl in Berks County. She said, "The most important thing I gained from 4-H is that I can talk in front of people and can give demonstrations. I have also gained a lot of friendships. I have met a lot of important people and a lot of just friends. 4-H has also given me responsibility. Without it, I wouldn't be able to serve on committees."

Cathy also participated in the summer institute sponsored by the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives. She attended two years in a row. As a second year scholar she said one of the most meaningful things was helping to run the "mini-co-op." This is a cooperative organized with a board of directors and operated throughout the conference. The co-op promotes the PAFC Institute, sells group pictures of the conference, sells T-shirts and organizes and sells tickets for a pizza party and dance. Each member pays in $1.00 to get organized and at the end of the week the co-op is dissolved and the profits divided. Cathy said everyone made an additional $1.00 profit and there was about $30 left over to donate to an alumni fund for PAFC.

Cathy said the members were particularly pleased with

It seems the pleasures of our childhoods were more simple than those enjoyed by today's youth. Yesterday I heard a lady describe her family's schedule of eating an early dinner and getting up at a certain time each summer morning in order to be at the swimming pool and take part in their activities. It sounded like a real chore.

My six sisters and I didn't swim every day nor even every week but when we had an especially hot day a dip in the creek or just sitting in a cool, rippling stream was a treat. Depending on how secluded a spot we chose, just an old dress was sufficient coverage. Even our great aunt enjoyed sitting on the rocks with her feet in the cold water. Our first bathing suits were all wool and changing to other materials was unpleasant as they didn't hold body warmth as well.

Oh, memories of the old swimming hole!

Recently I read a letter written by a woman who deplored the fact that everyone thought she had a "green" thumb because of her abundant supply of vegetables. Now, she knew that her thumb was "black" from all the hard work which went into her garden. Most of us farm wives would agree with her, I'm sure.

The other day when I was picking a box of cherry tomatoes, I remembered something that happened years ago when I put some along the road to sell. They were quickly bought by a neighbor girl and then just as quickly returned. It seems the mother thought they were sour cherries - in how well they did because they did not raise prices over previous years and still made a nice profit, "despite inflation." Cathy was a member of the Board.

"I never realized before all the work involved in running a business. But I learned that you make profits by patronizing your business."

Cathy's activities are not limited to 4-H. She is a 1975 graduate of Daniel Boone High School and was editor of the school yearbook last year. She was also a basketball statistician, which she says "wasn't hard, but you had to concentrate." She was a member of the Y-teens and the student council. She is also a member of St. Paul's Lutheran Church Douglassville.

In September Cathy will enter the University of Pennsylvania Hospital School of Nursing. She said she chose nursing because "I like working with people, and nursing is a profession you can really work with people." She said she did not choose a home economics-related field because "I don't want to be a school teacher and I didn't want to go into extension work because it is a 24-hour job. Later I want a family."

Cathy says she enjoys living on a farm and much prefers country life to city life, although her mother pointed out with a laugh that she'll soon get to see the other side when she enters nursing school.

Her views on the outlook for dairying are that "farmers must band together. Any other group joins together and is strong, but every farmer is in competition with every other farmer. The dairy industry could be one of the strongest unions and could get anything done, if the farmers could just get together," Cathy said.

In her spare time, what little there is, Cathy enjoys sewing and making crafts. She also likes baking and cooking, and says her favorite milk recipe is rice pudding.

She works part time on a near-by golf course in the snack bar, and is already at work promoting the dairy industry by dispensing a drink which is half chocolate milk and half cola. She says everyone thinks it's very refreshing!

If she continues to put that kind of promotional ability to use for the dairy industry, Cathy Yanos will be a big asset to the Berks County dairymen.

September heat wave got you feeling like the last rose of summer? Perk up fast with an impromptu picnic. Pick up the fixings at your delicatessen. Add sparkle to the cold cuts with off-beat relishes. Try cranberry-orange relish with liverwurst. Zip up the skinless franks with apple sauce spiked with horseradish. Chutney or pickled peaches are real taste picker-uppers, too.

Penn State fruit day slated

UNIVERSITY PARK — "Hoop skirt" apple trees, trellis hedgerows, and trees trained to slender spindles will be among featured exhibits for Fruit Day September 4 at the Agricultural Research Center of Penn State University, 10 miles southwest of here on Route 45.

Dwarf apple trees are used in Penn State's experimental orchards. Economic studies rate dwarf apple trees the most profitable for growers with small acreages of suitable sites and adequate finances. While costs of establishing dwarf tree systems are higher than for semi-dwarf and standard systems, trees produce earlier and give higher yields and better quality apples than the other systems.

In charge of a walking tour on September 4 will be Loren D. Tukey, pomologist. He indicated the trellis hedgerows, developed initially for the Penn State over-row harvester, can apply to pick-your-own operations as well as commercial plantings hand picked. Although uncommon in the United States, trellis hedgerows are used widely in Europe.

Slender spindle trees feature a pole supporting the central stem or leader. Such dwarf trees are planted when 2 years old and are designed to produce apples the next year - an instant orchard. Tukey said this method is noted for early cropping, high yields per acre, and convenience of picking. The slender spindle apple tree, he noted, is used widely in Europe and has attracted the attention of growers in many parts of the world.

The "hoop skirt" apple tree is somewhat like the slender spindle but is a variation developed by Tukey. Most of the crop is located 4 to 5 feet from the ground within easy reach of pickers. As with all dwarf trees, no ladders are needed so pickers can be women and children. The central stem or leader serves as a control over the skirt. "Hoop skirt" trees require less initial pruning and training than trellis hedgerows and are a little wider than slender spindle trees. This system can be applied to any apple tree, Tukey said.

Cabbage - A Favorite
Cabbage - in its various forms - is one of the most widely used vegetables around the world. First brought to America by the Dutch, it was soon to become famous in the New England boiled dinner. Its use in cole slaw and sauerkraut alone has made it a major crop in this country. The early cabbages - in season now - are green, conical in shape, and have large curling outer leaves and a rather firm head.

To cook a cabbage, remove coarse and torn outer leaves and trim the stalk. Either cut the cabbage into several sections, or shred it. Then soak it for a half an hour in salted cold water. After draining, it can be boiled or steamed. When just crisp tender, add butter, salt, and pepper. Or, try sauteeing shredded cabbage in butter, bacon fat, or pork dripping, and then adding a little white wine or stock for

LADIES, HAVE YOU HEARD?

By Doris Thomas, Extension Home Economist

Indian Gauze Popular Fabric

Indian gauze has become a fashion fabric. This thin, cotton, open-weave fabric is ideal for fuller fashions. It is light without weight, makes up well in flowing, loose designs, is comfortable in hot weather and for keeping with the ethnic trend in fashion.

Gauze is woven with twisted yarns and shrinks when removed from the loom. Because of its loose, crinkly-type construction it does require some skill and patience in handling. Use the following tips when sewing with gauze.

If you haven't tried sewing with this fabric, you might experiment first. Techniques are similar to those used on most light weight cotton fabrics except the crinkle may get in the way. Stretching the fabric as you sew will help you get smoother seams and finishes.

You may find you need less ease allowance than on other woven fabrics because the crepe finish stretches somewhat when worn. You probably will not use this fabric for tailored styles requiring interfacing but if an interfacing is necessary select a light weight fabric. If the fabric seems to ravel, stitch both seam allowances together one-fourth inch from the seam line and trim away the seam allowance beyond the stitching.

As with any fabric new to you, you'll have to use your good judgement in deciding the best procedures. Determine the results you want and build on your sewing knowledge to decide the easiest and quickest way to achieve it.

Gauze tops team well with denim and these, too, will be highly promoted for fall and winter. Next spring you can expect to see variations in the weave and design of gauze fabrics. American manufacturers are now making gauze fabrics with permanent wrinkles.

Tips on Freezing Fresh Tomatoes

Tomatoes are one of the most popular vegetables in this country. They are easy to grow and can be served in many ways. To get the most good from tomatoes eat them fresh or raw, but remember, too, that they retain a large share of their nutrients when cooked, canned, or frozen.

About three medium-sized tomatoes weigh a pound and a bushel weighs around 50 pounds. But it will depend on the variety you grow or buy. When buying tomatoes look for those that are:

Mature, well-ripened, firm and plump. Good color characteristic of the variety. Smooth and well formed for serving whole or sliced. Free of blemishes, deep cracks and insect damage. Tomatoes that have growth cracks or irregular shapes usually cost less per pound because the trimming waste will be greater.

Tomatoes are perishable and spoilage loss is expensive. Handle tomatoes with care both before and after you buy or pick them. Tomatoes don't have to be fully ripe when harvested or bought. But if they are fully mature, of good quality and have not been refrigerated, they will continue to ripen at room temperature. Avoid placing them in direct sunlight while they are still ripening. After tomatoes are ripened to your taste, refrigerate them in a closed container or covered vegetable tray for best keeping quality.

Canning is probably the most commonly used method of preserving tomatoes for year-round use. However, you can freeze tomatoes. You can freeze fresh ripe tomatoes but you will have to cook them in some way before serving. Or freeze tomatoes as juice or stewed. Frozen tomatoes, juice, or stewed tomatoes will take up a great deal of space in your freezer. But if you have ample room, freezing might be a good way of preserving them if you have a limited supply of canning lids.

To make tomato juice, wash, sort, and trim tomatoes. Cut in quarters or eighths, and simmer 5 to 10 minutes. Press through a sieve. Season with one teaspoon salt to each quart of juice. Cool. Pour into freezer containers with wide top opening, allowing 1-inch head space at top of each container. Seal, label and freeze.

To make stewed tomatoes remove stem ends, peel and quarter ripe tomatoes. Cover and cook until tender about 10 to 20 minutes. Place pan containing tomatoes in cold water to cool. Pack into wide-topped freezer containers, leaving 1-inch head space per quart; ½-inch if using pint containers. Seal, label, and freeze.

"Cream Cheese Franks" make a Halloween hit with teens and adults. Split one pound of skinless franks half-way through. Fill with a mixture of one package (3 ozs.) cream cheese blended with one tablespoon minced chives. Wrap each frank in a strip of bacon. Secure with picks. Broil eight minutes, turning to brown evenly. Have a batch of toasted buns ready.

Maryland pork gets oriental touch

TIMONIUM — The Maryland State Fair, held here, which for 94 years has spotlighted the State's array of agricultural products, from apples to zucchini, will this year be the scene of a special presentation with a touch of the Orient.

A demonstration of barbecued pork cookery by a professional Chinese chef has been scheduled in connection with the 5th Annual Porkcuc Cook-Off, sponsored by the Maryland Pork Producers Association, at the Fair Grounds, August 29, at 7:00 p.m.

Mr. Chen King Boa, head chef at Washington's popular Trudie Ball's Empress Restaurant, 1018 Vermont Ave., N.W., will demonstrate the preparation of several pork dishes from his native province, Szechuan, a region internationally noted for its piquant, gourmet cuisine.

Mr. Chen, who once cooked for the family of Madam Chiang, wife of the Late Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, has also prepared his specialties for many Washington dignitaries, including Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Food ain't all

Restaurant patrons used to demand good food first, followed by good service, cleanliness, reasonable prices. Today - presuming presence of all the foregoing - atmosphere is the big drawing card, according to a report in a major news magazine. Many new restaurants feature "theme dining," serving food in old railroad cars, river barges, airplanes, bank vaults, barns, churches and warehouses. One restaurant executive said, "People are looking for more than a meal. They want a total experience." Many specialty restaurants planned for those eating out on limited budget, others offer more expensive fare.

How to make more milk from the same amount of feed

The "balanced bite" is one key
The Schwartz Mixer Wagon is the other

Cows vary greatly in their individual preferences for one forage over another. So while some of your cows may be getting the diet they need to maintain peak production, others may be short-changing themselves getting plenty of protein perhaps, but not enough energy to balance it. What can you do about it?

The Agway Total Mixed Ration

TMR is the best way yet devised for feeding a ration that's perfectly balanced for nutrient content. It eliminates cows' preferences.

But TMR feeding can be no better than the equipment used to mix the ration. Accurate measuring and thorough mixing are musts.

Farm Systems
Service

Most versatile way to feed TMR ...the Schwartz Mixer Wagon

It accurately proportions, thoroughly mixes, then transports and distributes nutrients in any prescribed amount and formulation. So it's easy to feed the right ration any place on your farm.

Triple augers tumble and turn feed end to end to perfectly blend liquid, granular or pelleted supplements into silage, chopped hay or ground grain. Five to seven minutes does the job. Controls are convenient—assured positive solid construction assures trouble-free operation. Three sizes to choose from.

"It is really hard to believe a wood stove could give so much satisfaction. The floors are kept warm, the heat is circulated, and there is no shaking of grates, pulling of coals forward, or flying ashes, or filling up the box with new wood. The drafts are controlled so the wood will burn for 12 to 18 hours without being refilled or disturbed."

Cookbook combines recipes and history

CHICAGO, ILL. — It's no coincidence that beef is America's most liked food. The history of our nation and that of the beef industry is intertwined.

Beef cattle first appeared in the American Southwest in 1540; in the East the first cattle arrived in 1624 - only four years after the Mayflower. As our population grew so did the need for more cattle for nourishment as well as for oxen to pull plows, and by-products such as hides for leather and tallow for candles.

Keeping this in mind, it is fitting for the Beef Industry Council of the Meat Board to publish a special beef cookbook celebrating our nation's 200th birthday. "The Bicentennial Beef Cookbook" features 100 of the greatest beef dishes from America's first 200 years," says Reba Staggs, Director of Home Economics for the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

"Some originated in pioneer kitchens, some traveled to our shores with our European, Asiatic, or African ancestors. But they are all uniquely American."

Recipes included range from Beef Jerky to Beef Wellington; from Red Flannel Hash to a Rib Roast with Yorkshire Puddings. The book includes 16 full-color pictures; facts about beef such as carving, care and storage, freezing and defrosting; the six basic beef preparation methods; tips for the outdoor chef; a chart showing where retail cuts come from; information on labelling and nutrition; and a glossary of beef terms.

Additionally, scattered throughout the book are historical tidbits such as the fact that although most people associate "range wars" with the West, the first such conflict in the U.S. was waged on Manhattan Island. Early Dutch settlers battled to keep Indians from stealing their cattle and built a wall to keep the Indians out. Where this wall was built is now known as Wall Street.

A cookbook was chosen to headline the Council's bicentennial promotion because of the proven popularity of such books with consumers. "It's an ideal way to encourage people to try new beef dishes," says Staggs. "Also it is the logical method to illustrate the versatility of beef, and at the same time provide a valuable service to the consumer."

"In the Bicentennial cookbook we were forced to choose from an immense assortment of beef recipes tested and developed over the past 53 years by the Meat Board," added Staggs. "I think we have succeeded in presenting those recipes that best represent our nation. From the simple to the elegant to the exotic - there is something for all tastes in the cookbook."

The book is being made available in fall editions of Family Circle, Woman's Day and Good House-keeping. Copies can also be purchased by sending a check or money order for $2.00 to Beef Industry Council, Dept. TC, 36 S. Wabash, Chicago, Illinois, 60603.

York Central Club

The Central Dairy 4-H Club of York County met on August 7 at the home of Gary, Tommy, and Joey Welsh, Rt. 1, East Berlin. The American Pledge was led by Tommy Welsh and the 4-H Pledge was led by Timothy Eisenhart. Roll call was answered by the age of the animal to be shown at the 4-H Dairy Roundup on August 19 at York Fairgrounds.

Tommy Welsh showed members the equipment that is necessary for their showbox. Leo Rutter and Mrs. Jane Thompson, leaders, discussed requirements for the Roundup and York Fair. Plans were made for meetings for next year.

Gravity Grain Wagon
DMI, Inc., Goodfield, Illinois, announces the addition of the new model E312A center dump grain wagon featuring a rear unloading auger to their line of Big-Little gravity grain wagons. The elevating auger unloads up to 100 bushels per minute at a discharge height of 11 feet, and empties the wagon in four minutes or less. The auger features a 360 degree swiveling head with spout cover, and an extension chute for rearward unloading. The vertical auger tube swings 32 degrees left or right, on a multiple position locking rail for side unloading.

The vertical auger is 11" in diameter and is designed to operate at 540 RPM from a tractor PTO. PTO linkage is provided as standard equipment and folds up out of the way for easy transport. A safety shear-pin is included in the coupling knuckles to prevent damage to the auger mechanism in case foreign material jam the flights.

The DMI model E312A Big-Little grain wagon has a 300-plus bushel capacity, but small overall size. The unit has a short wheel base and narrow turning radius which afford much better handling. The combination of an oscillating front axle and even distribution of weight provide near perfect stability and minimum tip-over. The center dump design is ideal for fast unloading at all pit installations. The wagon features big 13.5 x 16.1 - 8 ply tires with all non-skid tread which provide a large diameter for less rolling resistance in muddy fields. Eight bolt wheels with brake flanges on all 4 spindles are included as standard equipment that allow for easy installation of brake assemblies at a future date. The hopper is made of 12 gauge steel with 16 gauge extension sides. For further information contact: DMI, Inc., P.O. Box 65, Goodfield, Illinois 61742.

Fiber Glass Rack

Greater payload capability is one of the primary advantages of a newly designed bale throw rack made of fiber glass reinforced plastic pultrusions that weighs just half that of wood or less than half that a steel pipe rack would weigh. The lighter weight rack permits more to be loaded on the rack and pulled just as easily - especially in wet fields.

Manufactured in three standard lengths, 16, 18, and 21-feet long, all bale throw racks are a full 8-feet wide and 7½-feet high. Unloading access is provided by a gate on each side of the rack, and a 3½-foot high front section.

The floor of the bale throw rack is made of Plyglass® panels, which consist of sheet plywood encapsulated on every side by fiber glass reinforced plastic. The sidewalls are fabricated of MFG Extren® fiber glass reinforced plastic structural members, such as square tubing, channel, and angles. Aluminum fasteners are used to join the structural members together. The design of the fiber glass shapes and the placement of the members in the rack provide tensile strength equal to that of mild steel. In addition, shock loads will not dent or break the fiber glass shapes - the material has the ability to absorb shocks without breaking - and - springing back to its original position.

Other advantages of the fiber glass bale throw rack include: does not require inside winter storage, rain and snow will not be absorbed and the material will not freeze; will not rust like metal, nor rot like wood; molded-in color provides good looks; and equipment may be steam-cleaned.

BUTLER KAN-SUN BATCH DRYER

The Kan-Sun Batch Dryer is especially designed for:

- the farmer whose daily harvest rate is under 2,100 bushels.
- the farmer who is drying grain for the first time, and wants to make a minimum dryer investment.
- the feeder who raises limited amounts of grain, and doesn't want to haul his grain to town for drying and haul it back for feed
- the farmer with separate field and storage locations; the portable Kan-Sun Batch Dryer can be moved to the grain, and to the storage.
- the farmer who owns an in bin system, such as Butler Stor-N-Dry®, and wants to increase his daily drying rate, he will use the Kan-Sun for drying, and the bins as cooling and storage tanks (dryeration)

The Butler Kan-Sun Batch Dryer can remove 10 points of moisture from 90 bushels of corn an hour. In a 24-hour drying day, the total dried and cooled will be 2,100 bushels. Using dryeration can increase drying capacity to 2,700 bushels.

Mixer Wagons

CHICAGO — International Harvester has announced the addition of the International 200 and 300 Ration-Rite Silage Mixers to its line of feed handling equipment.

With their reported mixing action these two models, it was stated, can prepare a ration quickly and "on-the-go." The Ration-Rite unit thoroughly mixes silage, haylage, supplements, grains, molasses, pre-mixes and delivers them to the feed bunk with dependable accuracy.

Available in two sizes - 175 and 240-bu. - the Ration Rite Silage Mixers have a low, easy-to-load design; a PTO-operated, heavy-duty drive; power auger for fast unloading; hydraulic actuated unloading door; handy fold-up unloading chute; and an electronic scale as standard equipment.

Except for size both mixers are alike. The units thoroughly pre-mix carefully - controlled proportions of ration content and users can count on maximum mixing accuracy for top feeding efficiency, it was pointed out.

Fiber Glass Wagon Platforms

Constructed entirely of fiber glass reinforced plastic pultrusions - the wagon platform comes in 7 and 8-foot widths, and 12, 14, and 16-foot lengths.

In addition to the increased payload advantage, the fiber glass platform is also rust-free, corrosion-resistant to normal farm chemicals and fertilizers, has the tensile strength of mild steel, and may be stored out-of-doors without damp-rot. Unlike wood platforms which will soak up moisture when left out - fiber glass will not be harmed by rain, snow, or freezing weather.

The grain-tight floor of the platform is constructed of Plyglass® panels which consist of sheet plywood encapsulated by fiber glass reinforced plastic. The modular shape provides great strength coupled with uniform good looks. Fiber glass pultrusions have twice the rigidity of wood but also "give" a little when under a shock load. If damaged by abuse such as backing at full speed into a tree or barn, the fiber glass may be repaired in the field with a convenient repair kit. Grain sides are also available to fit the platform without modification.

"SELF HITCH"

A versatile line of tractor hitches for 3-point applications is available from Metro Hydraulics Inc. Called "Self-Hitch", the features include using it as: an automatic 3-point quick hitch, a removable self-hooking drawbar hitch, and a traction hitch.

With "Self-Hitch" the operator can hitch up without ever leaving the tractor seat; he can also unhook the drawbar without leaving his seat.

No adapters are needed for any of the hitches, and they will fit all category 2 and category 3 tractors. "Self-Hitch" is raised and lowered by use of the hydraulic system, and with the drop-in drawbar, it becomes a traction hitch on all pull type equipment. This lets you transfer the weight and pull of the equipment to provide extra traction for the tractor wheels.

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, August 23, 1975—63

The self-latching drawbar drops in easily or is quickly removable to permit access to the power take-off. Hitches are rugged and durable and are guaranteed. All hooks are heat-treated, high-carbon steel, and won't peen out.

The line of "Self-Hitches" is manufactured by Metro Hydraulics Inc., P. O. No. 20010, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55420.

Which Farm Ventilating Fans Use More Electricity Than Others?

You know that electricity costs money. You also know the importance of saving money and energy today. But, did you know that not all ventilating fans are created equal? Even with the same air moving capacity some use more electricity than others. How much more electricity one make and model ventilating fan will use when compared to another can be measured by cubic feet of air per watt. We have the efficiency report on five major manufacturers of ventilating fans. Send the coupon below for your free copy!

GLENDALL is siring a sensational type pattern, combining height with strength. His daughters are tall, strong cattle with exceptional rumps. The rumps are long with much width to the pins. Udders are outstanding in milk-out and quality with firm attachments, both fore and rear. Legs have good bone and correct set to the hocks, with well formed feet. Glendell appears destined to be one of SELECT SIRES most popular proven sires.

Berks conservation tour held

By Lucy Trexler

Under the auspices of the Berks County Conservation District, Soil Conservation Service, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Cooperative Extension Service and the DER Bureau of Forestry, Berks County sponsored its annual conservation tour.

First on the scheduled stops was the Blue Marsh Dam being built by the Army Corps of Engineers. Robert Jagard, supervisor of the project, spoke briefly of the dam construction and eventual outlook when it is finished. The dam will be multipurpose, providing the area with flood control protection, recreation, water supply and water quality. Out of the 5500 acres bought for the dam, 1,000 will be actually covered by water. Included on this stop was a brief trip through an historical exhibit portraying the background of the Blue Marsh area.

Cannon Laboratories, Reading, was the second stop on the tour. Cannon

Laboratories' investigations span the full range of the biological and chemical sciences testing for trace elements in plant and animal tissue. Their clients include leaders in the pharmaceutical, food, agricultural, chemical, cosmetic, and toiletry industries. The tour included a trip through the various animal buildings housing pigs, rabbits, quail, chickens, ducks, dogs and monkeys, plus a complete view of all the various testing laboratories. This look at the scientific aspect of agriculture gave the tourgoers some idea of all that is involved during the testing of various farm & home chemicals.

Before lunch at the Bernville Grange, a brief stop was made along route 183 to see the timber stand improvements work being done by the Bureau of Forestry.

Lunch was followed by a tour of three county farms. Berks County Conservation Director, Donald Duncan showed the group the manure storage area on his farm which can accommodate waste from over one hundred cows for a period of four to five months.

From there it was just a short trip over the hill to the farm of Edwin Gelsinger. Gelsinger is running corn fertilization tests with the cooperation of the Berks County Extension Service and Conrad Weiser FFA. The corn has been fertilized with several types of organic and chemical fertilizers including sewage sludge, liquid and solid cow manure and commercial fertilizer. So far the organic fertilizers are doing quite well. A final analysis will be made in the fall when the yield of each group can be determined.

Harold Heck was the last host for the 1975 Conservation Tour. He explained the use and advantages of his new haystacking machine and feeder.

Examples of contour farming and a diversion terrace can be seen on Heck's farm.

Fresh sausages such as thuringer, Italian sausage, bratwurst and fresh pork sausage are the most delicate of all sausage products. Refrigerate them immediately and use within a few days of purchase. For best results in preparation, never boil them say home economists for Union Carbide's Food Science Institute. They recommend gentle simmering, broiling, baking or frying.

Back to school means back to brown-bagging it for millions of children. The 200 types of sausages produced in this country provide an endless source of sandwich possibilities and they're packed with nutrition, too. One serving of sausage or skinless franks with enriched bread will provide more than one-fourth of the 55 to 60 grams of protein required for the day.

New animal import center selected

NEW YORK — Stewart Airport near Newburgh, NY, has been selected as the site for a new animal import center for the United States, according to a joint announcement made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA) of the state of New York.

The new animal import center, to be operated by USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), will replace a similar facility that has been in operation at Clifton, NJ, since 1903. APHIS Administrator F. J. Mulhern said the Clifton center has become too small to handle the large volume of animal and poultry imports coming into the United States.

APHIS proposes to build a $5.4 million facility on the 74-acre site at Stewart Airport to handle yearly imports of some 1,800 cattle, 800 horses, 300 zoo animals and 4,000 poultry — more than triple the current capacity at Clifton. APHIS operates two smaller import centers at Miami, Fla., and Honolulu, Hawaii.

Why you should add THE EFFICIENCY FACTOR to your feeding program

With feed at 5¢ per pound and cattle selling at 35¢ a pound, an investment of less than $1.00 per head for AUREO S 700 and AUREOMYCIN® returned $5.75 in five commercial trials.

When cattle arrive at your feedlot they've been stressed and exposed to a variety of disease organisms. Start them with a conditioning feed containing AUREO S 700 and feed it for the first 28 days. AUREO S 700 maintains weight gains in the presence of shipping fever.

Then follow up with feeds containing AUREOMYCIN chlortetracycline. AUREOMYCIN not only provides for excellent growth and feed efficiency but also helps reduce losses from liver abscesses, foot rot and bacterial diarrhea. For complete details contact any of the feed manufacturers listed below or call or write The Fox Company.

Solar energy heats hen house

COLLEGE PARK, MD — Researchers at the University of Maryland have built what they believe is the first solar energy installation for heating chicken brooder houses.

"This should not be considered a practical brooding set up," says Kenneth Felton, the agricultural engineer in charge of the project. "We are looking for data that can answer some questions so that we can make recommendations — either for or against commercial installations."

"This project is not for today, it is for tomorrow," said Jarvis Cain, associate professor in the Department of Agricultural and Resource Economics. "The propane gas used to heat poultry houses comes from natural gas, and that is becoming one of our most limited energy resources. Whether we like it or not, at current usage rates, in 15 years there just won't be much natural gas left. We must have a workable alternative and we are beginning to plan for it now instead of when there are severe limitations on supplies of petroleum products."

"We know that if this system were installed on all the brooder houses in the U. S. it could replace 60 to 70 percent of the heat needed," says James Merkel, agricultural engineer. "This would be the equivalent of about 90 million gallons of propane gas, worth about 26 million dollars on today's market."

The University of Maryland installation near Salisbury on Maryland's eastern shore, is strictly a prototype model. The solar collector — made of easily available building materials — was constructed in sections in the university's agricultural engineering shop and transported to the eastern shore for final assembly. The collector is 32 feet by 16 feet and is free-standing. It could be constructed as part of the building in a new chicken house, Felton explained, but since this project uses a broiler house already in existence, the collector was built to stand alone.

Looking somewhat like a giant mirror, the collector tilts at 52 degrees from the horizontal to take in as much winter sun as possible. In this model, the collector is situated 15 degrees west of due south to take advantage of one hour more of sunlight in the afternoon — because most of the mornings on Maryland's lower eastern shore are hazy.

Felton explained that the collector uses two layers of double strength window pane separated by ½ inch air space. Under this glass, which is solely for insulation purposes, there is approximately one inch of air space above a layer of aluminum roofing. This aluminum roofing is painted black on the upper side to absorb more of the rays of the sun. Underneath the aluminum roofing is a two inch air duct backed up by a masonite board and five inches of fiberglass insulation; the assembly is held together by plywood.

A 12" x 12" duct made of ¾" plywood on the outside with a one inch polyurethane insulation laminated to a vinyl coating carries the heated air from underneath the aluminum roofing into the heat exchanger inside the building.

This heat exchanger works just the opposite of your car radiator, Felton explains. A fan draws the heated air over the coils and circulating water picks up the heat from the air.

This heated water then goes into a 1300 gallon insulated tank where it is stored until needed in the chicken house. The heated water is circulated through a standard convector in the chicken pen when it is called for by a thermostat.

The equipment does not run continually. It takes about a 10 degree temperature differential between the air and the water to trigger the equipment into action. When the sun goes down, or when the air temperature gets to within five degrees of the water temperature, the equipment shuts down.

Felton explains that it is not only the sun's heat that is being collected, but also the sun's radiation that creates the high temperatures. For this reason, some radiation is collected each day even when the sky is overcast. However, very little heat is collected on extremely cloudy days. That is the reason for the 1300 gallon tank which will store enough water to heat the chicken pen for about three days in case of bad weather.

"Right now, our solar collector is only partly operational. But it's a start," Felton explains, and emphasizes that at this stage it is purely a supplemental heating system. There is still a propane gas heater in the brooder house.

Lewis Carr, the agricultural engineer on the site who is in charge of the day-to-day conduct of the project and Tom Carter, poultry scientist, are responsible for collections and analysis of the physiological data on the chickens themselves. "We are using the conventional warm-room brooding technique with 1,000 broilers per pen." Thus far, there has been no difference with this heating system and with conventional propane heat since the temperature is thermostatically controlled and ventilation and humidity are controlled also.

Carr said the solar heating unit is actually in use now but limited data are being collected on this first flock since adjustments are still being made in the system. "The real test," he said, "will come next winter."

All the researchers agree that this installation is strictly an experimental one; however, since the supply of fossil fuel is growing shorter, the use of solar energy to heat poultry houses, green houses, hog farrowing pens, and grain dryers may come within the next few years. The University researchers want to be ready with some reliable data.

When harsh November winds blow, it's time to bring out the big kettle and simmer up a batch of hearty soup. For interest and added nutritive value, try Delightful Dumplings with your next pot of soup. Beat three eggs with two tablespoons melted butter. Mix in two tablespoons minced parsley, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper, one cup enriched bread crumbs and one cup mashed liverwurst. Form into walnut size balls; dust with flour; simmer 15 minutes in the soup. They're good with meat or vegetable soup and clear broth, too.

Tractor safety decals available in Maryland

COLLEGE PARK — Larry Stewart, a farm safety specialist at the University of Maryland has compiled a "basic 10" list from regulations promulgated by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA). These regulations went into effect on June 1, 1975.

They require that every farm employee who operates a tractor shall be informed by his employer of certain safety practices. This information must be given to an employee at the time of initial assignment to a tractor-driving job and at least once each year thereafter.

With financial support from the Maryland Agricultural Safety and Health Federation and the statewide Cooperative Extension Service, Stewart has had his "basic 10" listing printed on decals for affixing to farm tractors in a place where they can be easily seen by the operators.

The full 25,000 decals in the initial printing have been distributed to every county Extension office in the state, and they are available free to farmers — one for each tractor on a farm. None are available from Stewart's office at the College Park campus.

"My Stanford Seed dealer helped me out so much last year, I'm early-ordering my NK corn from him again this year."

Last fall, when I heard the news from the midwest that supplies of seed corn were going to be short, I knew prices would start climbing. I asked my Stanford dealer about it and he told me that the smartest thing for me to do was to order my NK corn early. He told me that the people at Stanford shared my concern about higher prices — and they did something about it. They authorized my dealer to give me price protection on my early NK order. That meant that if the price of seed corn went up, I would pay the lower early-order price. That sounded like more than a fair deal to me, so I ordered early. And you know what? The price went up later, saving me $2.50 a bag.

That's one of the reasons I'm going back to my Stanford-NK dealer now.

Another reason is the big yield potential of Northrup-King hybrids. NK corn took more than 80 first-place NCGA state championships in the last six years.

To me, that's convincing proof that NK hybrids are exactly what we need to get those high-profit yields from our corn acreage.

My choice this year is NK's PX76 — the next great hybrid for my area. For two years it has been the most consistent high yielder in NK trials across the mid-Atlantic region. You might need a mid-season corn on your farm, like PX 50A for grain or silage — or PX 20, an early corn with excellent standability, early spring vigor and fast dry-down.

On top of a high-yielding NK corn hybrid, the kind of help I need now is in straight cash savings. So I'm ordering my NK corn early again — this time to cash in on Stanford's big new early-order, early-pay discount deal.

I like doing business with people who are always there with the kind of help I can really use. That's why I'm staying with my Stanford dealer and NK corn.

USDA issues tentative decision on egg research and promotion

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced that evidence received at a public hearing justifies issuing a proposed nationally coordinated research and promotion order for eggs.

USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) called for public comments on its tentative decision by Sept. 12, after which a final decision will be made. If the final decision supports such a program, egg producers would vote on it.

AMS Poultry Division Director Connor Kennett said the proposed program would be financed by handler-collected assessments on producers of up to 5 cents per 30-dozen case of eggs. Producers not wishing to participate would be reimbursed upon written request.

Money collected would be used, he explained, to finance projects dealing with research, and consumer education and promotion designed to strengthen markets for eggs, egg products, and spent fowl (laying hens no longer productive).

The order is authorized by the Egg Research and Consumer Information Act, passed by Congress and approved by the President last October.

USDA's tentative decision and order is based on evidence received at public hearing sessions held during May in Atlanta, Ga., Philadelphia, Pa., Des Moines, Ia., Dallas, Tex., and South San Francisco, Calif.

The program would be administered by an Egg Board comprised of producers or their representatives selected by the Secretary of Agriculture. Members would be chosen from nominations submitted by eligible organizations, associations, cooperatives representing commercial egg producers, or eligible producers themselves. Each of six geographic areas of the 48 contiguous states would have at least two, but not more than four, members on the initial 18-member board. The number of members from each area would be based on the area's proportion of total U.S. egg production. All producers of commercial eggs owning more than 3,000 laying hens would be included under the order except those whose production of eggs is used primarily for the hatching of baby chicks.

The tentative decision was published in the Federal Register on Aug. 13, and exceptions may be filed until Sept. 12.

Comments should be submitted in four copies to the Hearing Clerk, Room 112-A, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250, where anyone may review them.

Copies of the tentative decision, which includes the proposed order, may be obtained from the Poultry Division, AMS-USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Rec info released

"For the very first time there is a summary of private recreation information available at the local level," said Aaron Z. Stauffer, chairman of the Lancaster County Conservation District. Recently, the Lancaster County Conservation District along with Pennsylvania's 65 other conservation districts received computer printouts of private recreation summaries. This established a benchmark as the first time this information has been completely gathered.

Back in February and March of 1974, an inventory team in each of Pennsylvania's conservation districts gathered information on private recreation facilities and enterprises. The project was done in cooperation with the National Association of Conservation Districts (NACD) and the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation. The information that was gathered by each county conservation district eventually found its way into BOR's computers in Washington, D. C. where it was tabulated and produced into national, state, and county summaries.

For additional information on private recreation summaries in Lancaster County, contact the Lancaster County Conservation District by calling 299-5361.

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, August 23, 1975-73 Hunter resolution adopted

At the August 13 meeting of the Berks County Soil and Water Conservation meeting the directors adopted a resolution proposed and adopted at the May 17, 1975 Executive Council session of the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation District Directors. The resolution applies to hunting and reads as follows:

Whereas: Hunting is as old as man himself.

Whereas: Hunting has proved to be a valuable and necessary tool in wildlife management.

Whereas: Damage to agricultural and forestry crops would increase tremendously as a result of curtailment of hunting.

Whereas: Untold millions of hours of recreation are derived from hunting.

Whereas: There is a rapid growth in anti-hunting sentiment and in propaganda being disseminated by the various media and other groups.

Whereas: The funds for wildlife management for most wildlife species are derived from the sale of licenses.

Whereas: Hunters have promoted and requested many of the leading Conservation laws and measures.

Whereas: Hunting and hunters contribute a great deal to the economy, particularly in less populated areas of the Commonwealth.

Whereas: Hunting reduces the wasteful slaughter of animals on the highways.

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: That the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation District Directors, Inc. go on record as being in favor of sport hunting and in opposition to any legislation or movement to curtail or abolish this valuable and ecologically sound wildlife management tool.

The Now Washbasket
By Bobbie Hill

Simply following directions eliminates many laundry problems, and one of the basic rules is: Sort out clothes and you sort out problems.

First, sort by color. Separate whites from colors, then separate light colors from bright or dark ones. A white fabric that's been damaged by dye transfer can possibly be restored by a color remover. Read and follow package directions carefully.

Next, sort by temperature and cycle. Fabrics like white cottons need hot water and normal agitation. Washable woollens need warm or cool water, a short cycle and gentle agitation. Permanent press and synthetics look best when washed in the "wash 'n' wear" or "durable/permanent press" cycle. If your machine doesn't have a special cycle, use warm water for normal soil and a cold rinse.

AGWAY

HERE'S A PROFIT- MAKING TIP FOR LIVESTOCKMEN . . .

WHEN IT COMES TO BEEF FEEDS, CONSIDER:

Agway 32% Beefmix - Protein 32% , Fat 2% , Fiber 9%

Brings cattle to market weight more quickly than grains alone. Here's why: It is fortified with vitamins A and D and the essential trace minerals. Contains a balance of proteins, including urea, which stimulates rumen activity.

Agway 55% Beefmix - Protein 55% , Fat 1% , Fiber 7%

This weight-raising ration contains 15,000 units of vitamin A and 30,000 units of vitamin D per pound. Only one pound per day will fatten beef fast, at a low cost per pound of animal gain.
